

Pet Insurance??

DeezeSphynx

Your kitten will come home with a certificate for Trupanion Pet Insurance. You must call them within 24 hours to activate the insurance. I believe it offers you immediate coverage (typically there is a 30 day wait for coverage) and it may imply the first month is free, but I don't believe anything insurance companies say, I think it may just mean you can cancel within 30 days. I know the policy is different in California too (two different certificates I'm supposed to send to new families) so research well.

WHY MEDICAL INSURANCE FOR PETS?

Owning a kitten is a big commitment — emotionally and sometimes financially. Medical insurance for pets helps remove financial barriers, so if your cat gets sick or hurt, your veterinarian can provide the best care possible for your furry friend — while helping ease your worries about money.

The Trupanion plan pays 90% of eligible veterinary costs for any new injury or illness, including hereditary and congenital conditions. And you're covered at any veterinary practice in the US, Canada, or Puerto Rico — all US and military installations included (CONUS and OCONUS).

Call 855.648.0087 within 24 hours to activate your immediate coverage.

Terms and conditions apply. Please see the policy for complete details at Trupanion.com/pet-insurance.

I do not carry insurance on my menagerie. We have too many, it would be cost prohibitive. BUT I have a huge reserve fund in case of emergencies and believe me, it's been used multiple times and re-funded! My suggestion for insurance for one or two cats is if you have easy access to a quick $5000 to drop at an emergency vet you can forego the insurance and just consider yourself self-insured. It is very easy for a single emergency vet visit to total $3-$5K quickly. I've been there multiple times. Quick cost comparison for insurance over the life of your cat: say you spend $30/month on insurance (one cat). That is $360/year. Say your cat lives at least to 10 years old that is $3600 in premiums over the life of your cat. Plus the $250 deductible and your part of the vet fee, usually 20%. That'll probably add up to at least $5K. Is the peace of mind worth it for you? Do you have available funds in case if emergency?

I've attached screenshots of kitten quotes from Trupanion, PetsBest and HealthyPaws. ($200—$250 deductible, 80%-90% reimbursement). I have no idea of the ins and outs of the differences between the plans but those are the three I've heard the best about.

Be sure to ask if the premium goes up as your pet gets older and if there is a waiting period. If you are going to use someone other than Trupanion and there is a waiting period I would definitely at least sign up for the Trupanion plan for the first month so you are covered as soon as your kitten leaves my house. ♥
